INTERNATIONAL EXAM PREPARATION

Test of Proficiency in Korean (TOPIK) is designed for non-native Korean speakers to certify their Korean language knowledge. It is currently being offered SIX times a year to people studying Korean in Korea and twice annually to people in other countries, including India.

The test measures your Korean proficiency through listening comprehension, writing, and reading. TOPIK is a general Korean test for those who want to study or work or immigrate to Korea.

TOPIK test has two levels – TOPIK-I and TOPIK-II. TOPIK-I, i.e. the beginner level, has two sublevels – 1 & 2 while TOPIK-II, i.e. Intermediate-Advanced level, has 4 sublevels – 3, 4, 5 & 6. Test takers get a level between 1 and 6 based on their total score in the test.

WHY LEARN KOREAN?

Korean language is spoken by more than 75 million people, of whom 48 million live in South Korea and 24 million in North Korea. There are more than 2 million speakers in China, approximately 1 million in the United States, and about 500,000 in Japan. Korean is the official language of both South Korea (Republic of Korea) and North Korea (Democratic People's Republic of Korea).

Officially, there are two standard varieties of Korean in Korea: the Seoul dialect in South Korea and the Pyongyang dialect in North Korea. The dialects are distinguished and regulated by each country's national language policy. Korean was heavily influenced by Chinese, but have adopted its own writing system in the 16th century.

Modern Korean still reflects China's deep influence over centuries. Roughly half the Korean vocabulary consists of words derived from Chinese, mainly through the Confucian classics. Today South Koreans generally use a hybrid writing system in which words derived from Chinese are written with Chinese characters, while Korean words are written in han'gul. (North Koreans totally eliminated Chinese characters and write even Chinese words in han'gul.) Despite word borrowing, Korean is completely distinct from Chinese, in sound and in sentence structure.
